

Photo by Nisachon P from Pexels <https://www.pexels.com/photo/person-wearing-pair-of-black-and-white-converse-all-star-low-sneakers-688832/>

THE UNIVERSITY of EDINBURGH School of Health in Social Science

www.health.ed.ac.uk

centre for applied developmental psychology

Sexual violence: Critical reflection on research, policy and practice

Teviot Lecture Theatre

(Doorway 5, Medical School, Teviot Place, Edinburgh)

Tuesday 5th December 4pm – 5.30pm

Sexual violence permeates our culture. We see it now in weekly headlines – not only in the UK but also in other countries, developed and developing (or emergent) economies alike. Sexual violence is a global problem. It therefore matters what policies, interventions and care we offer to individuals exposed to sexual violence. How we respond to it impacts on the research we do that informs the policy and practice decisions that drive change. In this seminar, Edgardo Toro, Anke Kossurok, Nikolaos Koukopoulos and Ethel Quayle reflect in four short talks on the landscape of policies, interventions and care for child and adult survivors on this timely issue.